of a barge in the North River, and night before last I was lying up against another barge. I heard a girl crying and naturally I looked about to see what was going on The girl I saw through a cabin window looked so much like the girl you have los that I'll bet my license she's the one I believe she's being held a prisoner

Mr. Armstrong found out where the barge skipper had taken this observation and then called up a private detective agency that has done work on the case There were no results last night from that investigation

Among the odds and ends of information concerning the case that did not come out until yesterday was how the family first discovered that something had happened to Dorothy.

"She was to have been at a bridge party on the evening of December 12." said Mr. Arnold yesterday. "When she did not return home in the evening her mother and I supposed that she had gone straight to the home of the girl who was to be the hostess. We were not at all concerned until late in the evening, when the girl friend called us up on the phone and wanted to know where Dorothy was Then we sent for our freinds and began "The Bryn Mawr girls," said one of them, "have formed an endless chain in prosecuting the search for Dorothy Each one of the Alumnæ Club in New York is writing five letters to her acquaintances and asking each acquaintance to write five letters. And all the letters contain a complete description of Dorothy and a request that anybody seeing her notify the family.

ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS

DEAD AT THE AGE OF 66 AT HER HOME IN NEWTON CENTRE.

Married to the Rev. Herbert D. Ward, Who Was in the South When She Died-Her "Gates A jar" the Most Talked Of Book of Its Day Back in the Last Century

Boston, Jan. 28. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward, well known as an author and lecturer, died at her home in Newton Centre, Mass., to-night after an illness of several weeks, aged 66. Her husband Herbert D. Ward, has been in the South, but is reported to be on his way home

ing and to the social betterment of the people of Andover. Her early life clouded by the loss of her brother in the civil war, and this is supposed to have set her mind along the paths which led her to writing "The Gates Ajar." Many asked whether Miss Phelps were a spiritualist or a Swedenborgian or whether she wrote he book out of her imagination. She was never a spiritualist. She wrote the Gates Ajar" series (including "Beyond the Gates" and "The Gates Between") be lieving that they represent what might be the truth.

On October 20, 1888, in a square cottage by the sea made famous by the "Old Maids and Burglars in Paradise" Miss Phelps was married to Herbert D. Ward the only son of Dr. William Hayes Ward the New York Independent. Only ten of the immediate families were invited to the ceremony, and only about a dozen more friends suspected it.

Mr. Ward was seventeen years younge than his distinguished wife. At the time of his marriage he was appointed professor of Latin and Greek at Taliadega College. He released himself, satisfac torily to the trustees, from his appoint ment, and adopted a literary career

Miss Phelps published "The Gipsy Series," in four volumes, before the ap pearance of the work which made her famous "Men. Women and Ghosts" appeared in 1869, and afterward among many others "Hedged In." "The Silent Partner" and "Poetic Studies

Latterly Mrs. Ward has written short stories which have appeared, frequently in the magazines.

"The Gates Ajar" is a religious story detailing in the form of a diary the meditations and aspirations of a girl who has lost a beloved brother. The hope of immortality and the nature of the future life are the principal themes and the writer ventures on imaginative glimpses into the celestial paradise. It appeared soon after the civil war when many were mourning their dead

Elizabeth Stuart Phelps was born in Boston August 31, 1844. She was the daughter of the Rev. Austin Phelps and granddaughter through her mother of the Rev. Moses Stuart, who was one of the ablest clergymen in the intellectual circle at Andover Theological Seminary in the years when that institution was at its height. Her father, Austin Phelps, was a professor at Andover and she lived with him for many years.

She began to write when she was 13 years old, and it was when she was 24 that the book which first brought her into prominence, "The Gates Ajar," was published. This book went through twenty editions within a year of its publication.

In these years and for many years thereafter Miss Phelps devoted herself to writing and to the social betterment of the people of Andover. Her early life was Rear Admiral David B. Macomb, retired, died on Friday morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. G. H. Bull, at 2489 Sedgwick avenue. The Bronx, in his eighty-fourth year. Rear Admiral Macomb served in the navy forty years. He was born in Tallahassee in 1827 and spent his boyhood on his father's plantations in the Everglades and in Texas. At the close of the Mexican war, in which his father served, he went to Chillicothe, Ohio, and in 1849 was appointed from Pennsylvania as third assistant engineer in the naval service. He was chief engineer on the ironclads Nahant and Canonicus of the James River fleet and the North Atlantic blockading squadron in 183-65 in the battles along the James River, and was present at the reduction of Fort Fisher and the evacuation of Charleston. He was retired in 1889 with the rank of Commodore. Admiral Macomb is survived by his wife and two daughters.

CUSTOMS MEN WON'T RESIGN. Say the Law Gives Them a Hearing and They Have Had None

The names of the twelve customs men. including one deputy surveyor and two acting deputy surveyors, charged with having accepted "house money" or tips for "facilitating" the discharge and weighing of cargo more than ten years ago, have been sent to Washington by Collector Loeb with a recommendation that the men be dismissed for the "good of the service." The men themselves say they had no chance to defend themselves against the charges, which they say came out in the minutes of the Federal Grand Jury that investigated sugar and other ases in the form of testimony from "selfconvicted grafters." All of the accused men were asked to resign and refused. They were told that there was a probability of criminal prosecution unless they did resign, but they said that nothing had been proved against them and that they were willing to stand the prosecution. There had be no move made by the United States Attorney to have the men indicted. One of the men said that he had had no opportunity to plead. He had been simply notified that there were certain charges against him, revealed in the minutes of the Federal Grand Jury, and that his resignation would, be accepted. He said he was entitled by the civil service rules to a

DEMAND UPON TURKEY. Punishment of Turkish Soldiers for

Fight on an American Steamship. WASHINGTON, Jan. 28. - Secretary of State Knox has sent instructions to. John R. Carter, American Minister at Constantinople, to insist upon the punishment of the Turkish soldiers responsible for the mutiny several days ago on board the steamship New Jersey of the American Archipelago line. A report on the incident was received at the State Department to-day.

Some Turkish officers and soldiers some Turkish officers and soldiers who were on board the steamship while at the port of Alexandretta insisted that the vessel should proceed to Smyrna at once without discharging her cargo. The captain of the vessel declined to comply and was supported by John T. Peristianv, American consular ragent there. A fight followed between the soldiers and the crew, in which several persons, including the consular agent, were injured. The Department has instructed Mr. Carter to lodge an emphatic protest with the Ottoman Government and to with the Ottoman Government and t demand adequate punishment of guilty persons.
